Over the last 27 years I have had occasion, annually, to consider the impact, the change, and the mark Legal Aid leaves on our neighborhoods and communities. Reading over the stories of our clients, seeing the statistics that evidence the needs of our low-income communities, and considering the number of people we were able to help during year 2 of the pandemic - I was impressed and I hope you are too. In these last two years, it has been more challenging than ever to stay the course, to keep our clients' needs in our line of vision at all times. The challenges of our work and the intense needs of our clients have been coupled with our own fears and uncertainty during this time. I’m deeply appreciative that my colleagues and LASNNY’s pro bono volunteers have helped so many clients - the homeowners, the domestic violence victims, the disabled - as these stories demonstrate. Our services and the impact we have achieved is the thread that unites our many geographies, clients, and community partners. I hope when you review these stories you will also be impressed and moved by our impact, and that you will once again, rise to the occasion and help us to serve more, and to serve more deeply, to have even greater impact in northeastern New York.

It is one of the joys of my life to have had a small role in creating impact like this.

PREVENTING FORECLOSURE

RAMON RAMIREZ

Born and raised in New York City, Ramon Ramirez made the move to Amsterdam in 2008. But shortly after he bought a house, he began to have trouble with his partner. When they split, trouble turned to crisis.

Ramon, 51, is a veteran. A violent car accident while deployed in Panama left him with PTSD, a diagnosis he received later in his life, at the height of foreclosure on his home. Reeling from this newly diagnosed and incapacitating disability, Ramon was in a seemingly inescapable hole.

That’s when a friend referred him to the Legal Aid Society of Northeastern New York. “When I reached out to Legal Aid to try to figure out if there was any way they could help me with the foreclosure, that’s when they recommended my attorney,” Ramon says. “From there he took care of everything and got me on track.”

LASNNY connected Ramon with two attorneys: Mike Telfer, who helped Ramon increase his disability benefits, and Stuart Thalblum, a staff attorney who helped Ramon navigate his mortgage foreclosure and explore his options.

“We submitted an application for modification, which actually was denied,” Thalblum says. “So I went to the court attorney and said that this is totally unfair, especially given that Ramon seemed to have adequate income to qualify. So the court attorney gave us the opportunity to make a second application, which we did and in fairly short order he received a permanent modification offer.”

Ramon’s principal increased but his payments went down by about $130, a payment that’s manageable with his Social Security Disability benefits. He lives alone now, and his two daughters and granddaughters happily visit Ramon in his home.

“My attorney was really on it, he was who I needed in my corner.”

223 FORECLOSURE PREVENTION CASES HANDLED IN 2021 BY LASNNY HOMEOWNER PROTECTION PROGRAM (HOPP) STATS:

- At the end of 2020, nearly 12% of all New York homeowners were delinquent on their mortgage, three times as many as there were during the worst point of the Great Recession.
- The foreclosure crisis disproportionately affected New York’s communities of color and increased the racial wealth gap, and the coronavirus pandemic has followed that trend.
- On average, Black homeowners are more than twice as likely to be delinquent than White homeowners since September 2020. Statewide, 43% of clients served by our network partners are homeowners of color.
- Homeowner Protection Program (HOPP) is a network of 88 nonprofit partners and is funded by the NYS Attorney General’s office.
- 1 in 10 homeowners behind on mortgage payments - Nearly 1 out of every 10 homeowners with a mortgage were behind on their payments in November, and that number will likely continue to grow with record-high unemployment in New York State.
CLIENT RECOVERS TEN YEARS OF DISABILITY BENEFITS WITH LASNNY’S HELP

Paula worked with Legal Aid Society of Northeastern New York attorneys to secure benefits after a decade of denials.

Paula worked for years to support her family and get them whatever they needed. She paid into the disability system without a thought, and never looked back – until she was faced with an accident that left her permanently disabled and unable to work on October 25, 2008. She, just like many others, applied to receive social security and disability benefits that she paid into while working. But to Paula’s dismay, her application was denied.

Paula was determined to prove her case and receive the disability and social security benefits that she was rightfully owed. She knew she qualified for these benefits and appealed multiple times, but each appeal was denied. She even resubmitted her application in February of 2010, but her application was denied a few short months later. While she waited for results, Paula continued to work despite her painful and crippling disability.

Years passed and Paula was frustrated after submitting several applications and appeals that were denied. She understood that she needed professional assistance to secure her benefits, but she couldn’t afford an attorney. She started to lose hope, until she consulted with attorneys at the Legal Aid Society of Northeastern New York (LASNNY). Ultimately, the attorneys at LASNNY took her case to federal court.

While multiple attorneys worked on her appeal over the years, William Holland, Esq. negotiated her federal court remand. An Administrative Law Judge then issued a decision finding that Paula had been legally disabled since October of 2008. Her original application was finally approved, securing over a decade of disability and social security benefits.

“We’ve been working with her for almost ten years, or more than that,” William Holland said. “She had multiple hearings and two federal court cases to eventually be approved. Not only that, LASNNY stuck with her - between four of five lawyers and all of the support staff - to eventually win. Paula deserves a lot of credit for sticking with it too, because she easily could’ve given up.”

Since then, Paula has received her rightfully earned benefits and maintained her quality of life. She’s been able to buy her home and take care of some lingering financial obligations. Paula is especially grateful for William and the rest of the LASNNY staff, who worked tirelessly to help her after multiple denials. While recovering from COVID-19 Paula offered these brief, but very powerful words.

“The LASNNY team helped me establish a foundation for me and my family,” she said. “They didn’t give up and fought for me throughout a long process and I’m thankful that I was referred to their services.”

ENSURING PROTECTIONS FOR RENTERS IN SCHENECTADY COUNTY

GAIL BROWN

In January 2020, Gail Brown moved into an apartment in Schenectady with her partner, her adult son, and her grandchildren. There were a few problems with the apartment, and she let her landlord know about them. One of her main concerns was that some of her windows didn’t work and seemed to be painted shut.

When the landlord hadn’t done anything about the windows by April, Gail called the Code Enforcement Office and asked them to inspect the apartment. A case was opened, but it was closed without an inspection and without any repairs being made. The landlord finally fixed one of the windows, but none of the others.

In the meantime, Gail was laid off from her job at Rivers Casino due to the COVID-19 pandemic, and she fell behind in her rent. During this period, Code Enforcement came to the apartment to inspect the property and issue a certificate of occupancy as required by Schenectady Code; this was the first Gail realized that the apartment did not have a certificate of occupancy. Code Enforcement saw the sealed windows and, despite the ongoing eviction moratorium, ordered Gail and her family to leave the property immediately. Gail and her family had to split up; Gail and her partner were forced to pay to stay in a motel. Although the Constitution provides that a person is entitled to notice and a hearing before being deprived of property (including a rented home)—or afterwards in the case of emergency—Gail was never offered a hearing.

Gail’s Legal Aid attorney, David Crossman, tried to negotiate with the city, both to change its procedure and to help her get back into her house. When this did not work, Mr. Crossman filed a lawsuit in Supreme Court on Gail’s behalf. They asked the court to find that the City had to offer tenants a hearing when ordering them to vacate their homes due to code violations; that the city law which allowed for evictions without hearings was unconstitutional; and also asked to be awarded attorney fees.

In April 2021, a year after Gail had first asked for the windows to be fixed, the Court found that the city law was unconstitutional because it did not give people the chance for a hearing. It also found that since there were state and federal eviction moratoriums in place when Gail was ordered to leave her home, the city’s actions in ordering her to vacate were against public policy. Finally, the Court found that the Order to Vacate was null and void and could not be enforced, and awarded Legal Aid attorney fees. (The City is currently appealing the decision, but it has passed a new law requiring a hearing for tenants a hearing when ordering them to vacate their homes due to code violations; that the city law which allowed for evictions without hearings was unconstitutional; and also asked to be awarded attorney fees.

Although Gail is now living in another apartment and reunited with her family, she is very pleased to know that there are protections for other renters in Schenectady and that they will not need to go through an ordeal like hers.

SUPPORTING SURVIVORS OF DOMESTIC VIOLENCE

SARAH

The day I met Sarah it had been three years since she fled an abusive relationship within an inch of her life, and two years since she last saw her daughter. The day Sarah left, the child’s father said “if you leave, you will never see my child again.” He made it clear that Sarah could only see the child if she moved back in, but Sarah knew that would result in more abuse, and maybe her own death. Sarah fled with the police to help get her daughter, but they turned a blind eye and said “Sorry, this is a family court matter”. Sarah went to family court. She filed the custody petition herself. She was assigned a court-appointed attorney—who would catch up on her case in the hallway minutes before they entered the courtroom. The abusive father hired a well-established attorney, and the Court was led into characterizing Sarah as a drug addict who had abandoned her child.

On the day of trial, Sarah’s attorney was not prepared. Sarah was told she needed to agree to the father’s terms, giving him physical custody of the child, with Sarah receiving a pittance of parenting time. Sarah recalled her attorney saying, “If you don’t agree to this, you might get even less.” She agreed. The Attorney for the Child put an objection on the record, making it clear to the Court that this was not in the best interest of the child.

It was less than a month after the final order was signed that the child’s father began withholding her daughter from seeing Sarah. After nearly a year in court fighting for her daughter, she felt defeated and traumatized. Sarah had nothing left.

Two years later Sarah found herself living an entirely different life. She had a good job, a supportive partner, a new baby, and had just bought a house. But as good as things were, the absence of her daughter gnawed at her every day. She knew she had to go back to court, and attempted to file the petitions numerous times, but the thought of facing her abuser in court always rendered her paralyzed.

One afternoon, a CPS worker knocked at Sarah’s door. CPS was investigating after an alleged incident where the child’s father had abused his current girlfriend with Sarah’s daughter present. Sarah explained that she did not have any information since she had been denied access for almost two years. Sarah disclosed that she was terrified of the child’s father and feared for her daughter every day, but felt she had no options.

The CPS worker referred Sarah to her local DV program, which then referred Sarah to the Legal Aid Society of Northeastern New York where she was provided free representation by an attorney. Both a custody modification and a violation petition were filed, carefully crafted to put Sarah’s voice at the forefront of these proceedings. The judge, who was new to the case, immediately granted Sarah 2 overnight weeks. That weekend Sarah saw her daughter for the first time in two years.

The case was settled just days before trial. While the father did still maintain physical custody since the child attended school 45 minutes away from the mother’s home, Sarah was able to reestablish her interest of the child.

Knowing she had dedicated legal representation at her side empowered Sarah to finally file the petitions she had been dreading. Working with an OVS attorney at the Legal Aid Society of Northeastern New York amplified Sarah’s voice and empowered her to always fight for her daughter.
PRIVATE ATTORNEY INVOLVEMENT (PAI) PROGRAM

PAI Director MALLORY GIBSON

2021 was a busy year for the PAI Department as we navigated the high need for legal assistance within our communities, caused by the COVID-19 pandemic. At the height of the pandemic, numerous businesses made the difficult decision to suspend operations or even close their doors forever, resulting in temporary lay-offs, furloughs, or loss of job completely for many within our community. This reduction or total loss in financial security forced households to fall behind on their rental and other housing payments. Addressing the socioeconomic implications of the COVID-19 pandemic was a high priority for the PAI Department in 2021. I am so thankful to our dedicated panel of volunteers and my colleagues in the PAI Department who met this need for assistance head on.

In response to the growing unemployment, rental, and housing crisis, the PAI Department held trainings dedicated to ensuring our volunteers were up to date with the ever-changing laws surrounding tenant rights, and pandemic related unemployment benefits. In April we virtually held an Understanding Unemployment Benefits in New York State During COVID-19 CLE. During national Celebrate Pro Bono Week in October 2021, we virtually held a Landlord Tenant Housing Law During COVID-19 – Attorney for the Day training. Additionally, in collaboration with Nixon Peabody, LLP we virtually held a Judicial Name Changes CLE in February 2021, with a virtual pro se name change clinic held the following month. Several attendees from the Judicial Name Changes CLE volunteered their time at the clinic and assisted clients with filling out the necessary name change documents.

In early 2021, the PAI Department announced its collaboration with In Our Own Voices (IOOV), under a grant from the New York State Division of Criminal Justice Services. The focus of the grant is to holistically address the unique legal and social concerns of the BIPOC LGBTQGNC survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault communities through legal education and assistance. Through this partnership and with assistance from our volunteer panel, we held three virtual “Know Your Rights” webinars throughout 2021. In April 2021, we hosted the first event, “Know Your Rights: All About Housing” with staff attorneys and volunteer Erica ‘Nic’ Rangel. In June 2021, we held our second event, “Know Your Rights: Planning with Pride” with volunteer Jon Whalen. In December 2021, we hosted our third event, “Know Your Rights: What’s in a Name” with volunteer Sarah Kempf-Brower. A pro se name change clinic was also scheduled for early 2022 with Sarah.

On May 3, 2021, the New York State Bar Association awarded three of LASNNY’s volunteer attorneys with the President’s Pro Bono Service Award. David Pratt received the President’s Pro Bono Service Award for the Fourth Judicial District and Kelly Curna received the President’s Pro Bono Service Award for the Third Judicial District. Joseph Pinto received the President’s Pro Bono Service Award for a Senior Attorney. At the 2021 Holiday Party jointly sponsored by LASNNY, the Legal Project and the Albany County Bar Association, LASNNY recognized PAI volunteer attorneys Jessica Vinson and Tom Keefe, as well as the law firm of Barclay Damon, LLP with Distinguished Service Awards.

The PAI Department expanded mid-year, hiring two new colleagues. Vincent Hickman was hired in August 2021 as a part-time PAI secretary, splitting their time between the PAI and HALC Departments. Vince will oversee operations of the Assigned Counsel Program, which is currently closed while we work with the Rensselaer and Albany County Courts to restructure the program. In September 2021, Lia Gifford was hired as our new PAI Coordinator, handling all matters in our department’s general referral program. They have both already proven themselves to be indispensable additions, and I am so excited to have them join the PAI team.

I am also delighted to announce that in late 2021, I began curating resources to create a landing page on our website exclusively for our volunteer attorneys. This resource page will include sample forms and templates, relevant statutes and case law, as well as all LASNNY created training materials for the various types of case matters regularly handled by our department volunteers. The resource page is still under construction, but our hope is that once completed, our volunteers will have a quick reference point for materials and relevant law for the cases they assist our clients with.

2021 was indeed a busy and transitional year for the PAI Department. I am thankful to the PAI staff, our volunteers, and all LASNNY colleagues who continue to undertake helping those who are so often systemically and legally marginalized within our community. I am grateful for LASNNY’s continued commitment toward ensuring equal access to justice year after year. I look forward to seeing what the future brings.
